Gastroscopy – argon plasma coagulation (G4)

You have had a procedure called gastroscopy and argon plasma coagulation (APC) today

A gastroscopy is a procedure where a thin, flexible tube called an endoscope is used to look inside the stomach. Argon plasma coagulation (APC) is a heat treatment which involves passing a probe through the endoscope into your oesophagus (gullet). Heat is then applied to stop small blood vessels from bleeding. Your doctor or nurse specialist will be able to explain more about how exactly the treatment has been used for your particular condition.

You have had a sedative injection so your physical and mental capabilities may be affected and you may feel drowsy.

For your own safety and the safety of others, you should follow the advice below:

- Do not drive any type of motor vehicle or ride any type of bicycle for at least 24 hours.
- Do not operate any type of electrical or mechanical equipment/machinery for at least 24 hours.
- Do not sign any legally binding documents for at least 48 hours.
- Do not drink any alcohol for at least 24 hours.
- You should not be responsible for young children, disabled or dependent relatives for at least 24 hours.
- Continue to take your normal medication unless you're advised otherwise.
- You can eat as you normally would.
- Rest quietly for the remainder of the day and if possible have someone stay with you overnight.

Advice given by: (signature of nurse)

Following the procedure you may experience some windy, cramp-like pains due to the air we passed through the endoscope. This is normal and should settle within 24 to 48 hours. You may also have a sore throat which should also settle within 24 to 48 hours. A bad taste in your mouth is also common.

If the pain does not settle, or you are at all concerned about your recovery, please contact the endoscopy unit on 023 8120 4392 (9am to 5pm) or your GP.

Patient information factsheet

If you cannot get through to either, or your concern is out-of-hours, please contact the emergency department on 023 8120 6220.

If you experience any severe pain in your chest or upper abdomen (stomach area), any shortness of breath or have any severe bleeding, you must attend your nearest emergency department. Take this sheet with you.

You can get further advice by calling 111.

After your endoscopy appointment

When you are discharged from the endoscopy unit you should be given:

- a copy of your consent form
- an advice sheet on what you should and should not do
- follow up advice
- a verbal explanation of what we have done to you today and what we have found
- a prescription if required
