

Scientist training programme (STP) open day

Thursday, 4 January 2018, 10am to 3pm

Are you a science graduate with a 2:1 degree or higher or about to complete a science degree and want to train to be a clinical scientist in the NHS?

We offer a range of programmes across the disciplines and invite interested people to see our hospital and what we offer.

The programmes we hope to offer for September 2018 are:

- CVRS - cardiac science
- CVRS – critical care science
- CVRS – vascular science
- Medical physics – radiotherapy physics
- Blood science – clinical biochemistry
- Neurosensory science – neurophysiology

(subject to confirmation of funding by Health Education England Wessex)

The open day will include:

- a general overview of the STP programme
- how UHS supports STP trainees to maximise their training
- presentations by past and present UHS scientist trainees
- tours of departments, where possible
- stands including posters and departmental information with staff representation to answer questions on specific areas.

For more information on the STP programme see: www.nshcs.org.uk
