

Raising a concern or complaint

Information for patients, families and carers through listening and learning'

Who do I contact?

Making a complaint means speaking up about something you are not happy with. If you choose to raise a concern or make a complaint, we will take it seriously.

There are different ways you can make a complaint:

1. It is usually easier to resolve concerns close to the time they occur. Talk to the staff looking after you. This may be the ward manager or matron for the department. They can discuss the things you are not happy with and will try to resolve them for you.
2. If your concerns have not been resolved by talking to the department, you can also contact patient support services. You can ask someone to help you contact them if you wish. Their contact details are below:

What happens when I make a complaint?

When you make a complaint, patient and family relations services will discuss with you how we will manage the matter.

We will:

- Acknowledge your complaint in three working days.
- Ensure a case handler will contact you in the coming days to introduce themselves.
- Explain the NHS complaints process and timescale.
- Contact and liaise with any other agencies involved in the event you are complaining about.
- Agree with you how we will respond to you. This may be by letter, email or in a meeting.
- Tell you how we are going to improve if our service is found to be below the expected standard.

It is important you contact us within 12 months of the issue occurring, or within 12 months of you becoming aware of the issue or its impact, in order for us to investigate your complaint.

Making a complaint will not affect the treatment you receive from us or form part of your medical records.

If you are not happy with the outcome of your complaint, you can contact the Parliamentary and Health Service Ombudsman (PHSO) by telephone on 0345 015 4033 or visit their website: www.ombudsman.org.uk
